A Vision for Business Planning | David Bower

Except the Lord build the "business," they labor in vain. Every business needs a plan! While planning is a given for startups, many established businesses are missing the opportunity to raise the bar. You can plan, prioritize, and manage proactively, or you can let your business react to events. In this session, we will cast a vision for business planning and the reasons to develop an annual business plan.

Planning with Financial Ratios | Larry Troyer

Financial ratios are tools to analyze how your business compares to similar businesses and to offer insight on the direction of your business over time. As the business owner or manager, you should value this information even more than your lenders do! The source of the needed input data is at your fingertips on the financial statements. In this session we will highlight how to use the ratio tools and what you can do to impact the future positively.

Business Analysis and Review | Greg Wolf

To plan effectively, you need hindsight about the past, insight about the present, and foresight about the future. What are your business's strengths and weaknesses? What needs improved? What are the opportunities or threats? Gathering such data and information from stakeholders leads to unfiltered facts on which to plan.

Planning Human Resources | David Bower

Without people, nothing gets done. Planning for people is the most important part of any business plan and must be aligned with all aspects of the business plan. This session will focus on some of the annual processes around people that go with annual planning.

2:00 - 2:15 PM BREAK

2:15 - 3:00 PM BREAKOUT SESSIONS

Planning Cost and Pricing | Larry Troyer

Understanding what you can charge for your goods and services is among the most valuable pieces of information to manage your business. Understanding what you must charge in order to have a positive cash flow is even more important! We will highlight the difference between fixed and variable business costs and how to account for them in your pricing models. Using the AF Financial Analyzer, examples will be reviewed to help better understand the impact of added expenses and cash flow requirements.

Identifying and Developing the Planning Strategies Greg Wolf

After the information has been gathered, leaders need to convert information into strategy. If you can get a clear picture of your strategy and really see it, feel it, taste it, then you can make your strategic plan happen. This session will help you identify and develop strategies most needed for your business.

Planning Sales and Marketing | Roy Herr

How much should we budget for marketing? What type of advertising works the best? We need more sales but nothing seems to work. How do we get people to open their wallet? We need to improve our marketing this year, but where do we start? How do we hire a good salesman? If any of these statements sounds like you, bring your questions and problems to this interactive session and take home real-world common sense that you can put into your annual plan.

3:00 - 3:15 PM BREAK

3:15 - 4:00 PM BREAKOUT SESSIONS

Clarifying Action Steps and Implementation | Greg Wolf

Research shows that 70 percent of strategic plans are not implemented. Any plan worth planning is worth implementing. What specifically is going to be done? Who is going to be responsible? By when? This session will tackle such questions and teach how to clarify action steps and monitor progress towards the goal.

Making it Work: A Business Planning Case Study Leonard Meador

Businesses should produce a plan that guides them through a period of one year. This session will show how a real business plan guided one business in reaching its goals.

Building a Budget | Larry Troyer

Creating a budget does not need to be tough, but it does need to be done! Without it, how will you determine if you are on track to achieve the result you desire? Budgeting needs to focus on both profitability and cash flow requirements to be successful. Learn how to build your business budget while properly accounting for oft-forgotten categories, as well as planned improvements that allow greater future profitability.
